

ABSTRACT

[0037] An alignment target structure includes a reflective member and a non-reflective field proximate to the member. The field is configured to enhance identification of the target and/or to enhance contrast between the member and the field. The field may include an absorptive structure and/or a diffractive structure.